>>Announcer: Pima Community College is a great choice to begin your education. You can start your degree at PCC and transfer to top universities in the United States. Some of our students have transferred to Harvard, Yale and MIT. Most of our students transfer to the University of Arizona, Arizona State University and Northern Arizona University.

Like PCC, the University of Arizona is located in the city of Tucson, in the state of Arizona, in the Southwestern United States.

>>Dong Liao: Pima will provide the real American education and you will use the greatest [use of?] Pima in the future if you want to make a transition to U of A. Moreover, you can save money, save the time. Will help you to graduation as soon as possible.

>>Announcer: Classes at Pima are small and are taught by nationally and internationally recognized professors, not graduate students. PCC has six beautiful, secure campuses. Each campus has the latest in laboratory and computer equipment.

Students receive personalized attention from advisors and counselors who are committed to student success. Our campuses have tutoring centers for additional educational support. Safe, modern housing is close to PCC's campuses.

PCC is a diverse learning community that values all cultures. In this way, it reflects Tucson.

>>Peter Chan: In addition to the services and the resources that Pima Community College has to offer, I think Tucson Chinese Cultural Center has a lot to add to that because the Chinese-American have been living in this area for well over 100 years and with the facility being here, we'll make that student feel at home if they should come in. I think that it would make their journey here, while in Tucson, a success.

>> Announcer: Tucson is a safe, friendly community of nearly 1 million people in the Sonoran Desert. The city is a cultural center with vibrant arts, and up-and-coming Downtown, great restaurants, and many opportunities to enjoy the surrounding area.
