

Federal regulations and Pima Community College (PCC) policies require that students maintain the GPA required by their program, and satisfactorily complete their classes to stay on track to graduate. These two measurements are called qualitative and quantitative, respectively. Students are also required to complete their certificates or degrees in no more than 150% of the published length of the program. Students must meet all three of these measurements as one of the eligibility requirements for financial aid.

If you are otherwise in good academic standing but will or have exceeded 150% of the published length required for your certificate or degree and have changed your program at Pima up to two times after the initial declaration of your program of study (three total declared programs during your academic career at PCC) effective July 1, 2017 going forward (excluding programs in which you earned a degree or certificate), you may request a recalculation of your SAP status without appealing or presenting extenuating circumstances.

By completing this form, you may request that your satisfactory academic progress (SAP) status be recalculated based only on those credits that are applicable to your current program. If you failed one or more of the SAP standards (67% completion rate or minimum cumulative 2.00 GPA) or changed your program at PCC more than two times after the initial declaration of your program (excluding programs in which you earned a degree or certificate) you are required to present and document extenuating circumstances with your SAP appeal and cannot use this form. Effective July 1, 2017 students are limited to a maximum of two different appeals during their enrollment at PCC. For additional information on the SAP policies please see the College catalog and the financial aid pages on the website.

I have exceeded (or will exceed) 150% of the credits (includes my transfer credits) required to complete my current program (of study). I am requesting a recalculation of my SAP status using only those credits that are applicable to my current program. I understand that if my request is approved I am only eligible to receive federal aid for the courses that are applicable to and required for my program.
