

Q: What is coursework that counts in a student's program of study?

A: Coursework that counts in a student's program is defined as coursework that is listed in the program of study in the student's catalog and is needed by the student to complete the program requirements.

Q: Will a course be counted if that course meets a program requirement that has already been met by a previous course?

A: It depends

- ▶ The course will not be counted in the federal financial calculation because the program requirement has already been satisfied by the previous course.
- ▶ However, the course may be counted if the student's program allows for elective credits and the student has room for more electives.

Q: Will an elective course count?

A: It depends

- ▶ The course will not be counted in the federal financial calculation if the program requirement for electives has already been satisfied by the previous courses.
- ▶ However, the course may be counted if the student's program allows for elective credits and the student has room for more electives.

Q: Will a repeated course count?

A: It depends

- ▶ The course will not be counted in the federal financial calculation if the course has already met the program requirement (generally if the course grade is a 'C' or better).
- ▶ However, the course may be counted if the student's prior attempt didn't meet the program requirement and the number of attempts does not meet the federal repeat rule.

Q: Will a prerequisite course count?

A: It depends

- ▶ The course will be counted in the federal financial calculation if the course is also listed as a program requirement.
- ▶ However, the course will not be counted in the federal financial calculation if the course is not listed as a program requirement and is not a remedial course.

Q: What if a student has already met all programs requirements?

A: If a student has met all program requirements the student is not eligible for further federal financial aid under that program of study. In this scenario, the college recommends students apply for graduation.
